Sounds of Love in Early Childhood: Music Therapy Class Helps Your Baby Grow

Program Description

Sounds of Love in Early Childhood is a research-based music therapy class to aid your baby’s growth and development. Through music and play activities, parents learn new ways to help their babies grow. For our families of NICU babies, it’s especially important. Parents and babies deserve a chance to “catch up” on some early building blocks of development and work on their future together. This class is led by board-certified music therapists with special training in NICU Music Therapy. We tailor the class to meet each child’s developmental needs.

Nationwide Children’s Hospital Music Therapists

Lelia Emery, MMT, MT-BC, is the senior NICU music therapist at Nationwide Children’s Hospital and has several years of experience working with young children and their families. In addition to working full time in the NICU, she is Nationwide Children’s music therapy internship director and provides NICU training for students and professionals. She received a bachelor’s degree in music therapy from the University of Alabama and completed a master’s degree in music therapy from Shenandoah University with an emphasis in developmental music therapy for older infants in the NICU.

Chloe Heintz, MT-BC, has been a part of the NICU music therapy team at Nationwide Children’s for over two years. She has previous experience working with infants in a childcare setting, and has gained experience across a variety of populations in music therapy during her training. Chloe completed her undergraduate studies at Western Michigan University in 2020 and will finish a master’s degree in music therapy at Shenandoah University in the spring of 2023. As part of her graduate studies, she is actively involved in research, looking at the impact of music therapy on infant pain expression during painful procedures.
